The Life Cycle Mural

The Mural commences from the left, depicting an embryo, cocooned in a dynamic swirl of creative energy. Moving onto an Argyll Landscape scene, which is of personal significance to the artist. The artist is seen creating an image at his easel, followed by iconic images from the world of cinema and a reference to the Collydean hands play sculpture. The mural concludes with a pictorial reference to the opening scenes from Chariots Of Fire, filmed at St. Andrews and a seated figure, contemplating the mysteries of life and death.
